

Performance Diadans on EigentijdsFestival NL

Introduction: Who is the last of the female lineage?

Everyone has a long lineage of female ancestors that leads back to the first woman. In general, we speak about forefathers, but we are never sure we are conceived by the seed of the men whose name we carry. Women who didn't get any children are the last of their mothers lineage, the last branch of the family tree. When a woman only gave birth to sons, she is also the last female of this family tree. Men are always the last of their mothers lineage. All his children are connected with the female family tree of his wife.

Hypotheses:

Transmission by way of water and cell plasma

Every human being is unique and free and has its own, specific task in life. At the same time we are a physical body, incarnated in the flesh. This physical body is our resistance and learning school to which we are livelong connected., and is the permission to stay on earth. The physical body is formed by our parents and ancestors and the patterns we have been exposed to. We inherit the same amount of genetic material from both our parents. From the father we inherit pure genetic material, for example talents. These talents and qualities are usually outspoken: they are visible, you can respond to them, you can choose to accept or reject them. From the mother we receive genes as well as hidden driving forces which are influenced via 'her water'. Initially by way of the cell plasma, after that the placenta, and later on by way of the breastfeeding, which means that we are much more under the influence of the mother. (*Emoto –water carries information). Consider that the egg cells are already present in a female embryo. So the egg cell receives the influence of the grandmother. The mother carries the egg cell for 20 or more years while the sperm of the man is not older than three weeks. The cell plasma probably contains hidden unconscious motives, which push us along in our dreams, longings, wisdom, sorrows, disabilities.

It is possible that the child in this hypothesis is being introduced in the motives of the mother, grandmother and maybe even foremothers. Mitochondrial DNA-research has also shown us that there is a continuous connection via the female lineage. Mitochondrial DNA does not change so it gives specific signals from generation to generation.

Ode to the last of the female lineage

You never understood why you didn't get any children and there you are; alone at the end of the matrilineal family tree. With the project Ode to the last of the female lineage you will get insight and acknowledgement for the exceptional position you find yourself in if you didn't bring any children of your own into the world. Realise that your impulse carries the future and that you can be an innovator in society, free from your own interest or economic gain.

Ode to the last of the female lineage
 Eternal is the line of foremothers never has the line been broken from mother to daughter In her water the mother carries information from all generations before her She carries the wisdom in her womb
 You, the last in line put yourself in fire and flame to purify the tribe
 you find yourself in the focal point where you transform bringing light and refinement The interruption of the line urges you to refine the best longing to purify the tribe invest unselfishly in a better world Grateful I am for your endeavour Honour your sometimes lonely task
 You keep the fire of the community burning.
 Anneke Wittermans 2008

© Anneke Wittermans www.beweegreden.org www.diadans.nl Projects are also in German Urtanz, Freigeben, Mammae, das nährend Prinzip

Only what belongs to you , you can crystalate

The line of mothers has never been broken;
 from mother to daughter,
 from navel to womb,
 from umbilical cord to yoni with all the foremothers into a buttonhole stitch.

You choose what you want to radiate from your ancestors
 When you are the last of the female lineage it is up to you to find a way to filter out of the family tree what belongs to you. Your (fore)mothers gave birth to you and your motives. Now you can choose what you want to pass on via light/air. This is your unique gift, your pearl that you can bring into the world as a contribution for the well being of the future.

There you are, being the last of the female lineage
 It is possible that not having children weighs heavy on a woman. It's a burden for her. The expectations and ideas about motherhood of her own and from others can put her under great pressure. But she is right there, standing in the middle of the breaking waves of all the inherited information she has to transform. That is because she will not transfer it directly via water to children but by way of air or light as the last branch of the family tree. Now is the time to acknowledge these women for their specific values and their importance in society. They often feel the urge to live meaningfully. They strive without counting the cost. They set the sights high. The last of the female lineage is 'a special job' that considers different standards.

Saying no to having children and allowing yourself to mourn for the not arrived descendants Saying: "No, I don't want children," is not freeing you from mourning of not achieving motherhood and grandmotherhood. The decision not to put children in this world because of the feeling not to be able to offer the child enough, lies underneath the surface and makes the mourning invisible for the people around them.

Administration of the estate
 Our grandmothers and mothers did not have the choice whether or not to have children; they came 'naturally'. They could not realize the callings of their talents and gifts, because they were occupied by the bringing up of several children. Nowadays there are a lot of women who finally find themselves in the opportunity to carry out the potency of the family tree. They are free from childbearing and get time and space to excel their capabilities. They are aware of the fact that they don't have children to whom they can bequeath the unattainable desires.

Cleaning the family tree

We often don't realize that if the family has an unfortunate history, or there is a hereditary illness, a woman can choose consciously not to pass this on to the next generation. In deciding so, she can ensure the quality of life to their offspring. In 'cleaning up the line' she refuses to pass things on uncritically to the next generation. By doing so, they take on a responsible task and sometimes suffer under the weight, while the other sisters and brothers are not concerned at all. Realize that if you are the one who chose to clean up, they even don't notice that they all benefit from your therapy and training to solve that what has been passed before. Fortunately we live in a time where we can work out the inheritance and learn to endure or have clemency to the unfortunate aspects of the family.

Clemency

If you are the last of the female lineage, you do not need to resolve everything or forgive what has happened before. Grant pardon yourself and the ancestors for the things that can't be resolved, but have taken place. Allow yourselves time to recover, you have permission to withdraw, to cherish your own wellbeing. Good maintained network as a support is a priority. That is the safety net that catch you when you fall back.

Realize what you can do

You can't respond to all the wishes and desires from the ancestors. Thousands of ancestors is too much to answer. Take out only that of the foremothers stream, what really fits, like the thymus accepts only the viruses which support you to develop. The only necessity is to focus what really belongs to your life right now. And know that you might be alone but not the only one. If you are the last of the female lineage, you do not need to solve it all by yourself. Many women are in the same position. Form a network of support and find a solid approach together.

Transmission via radiation

When you are aware that you are the last one of your mothers line, it urges you to be essential. You are called to give expression to that what has been build in this female family tree during eons. You wish to refine the end. Now the stream comes to the shore, the waves break powerful because of the resistance of the finish. There you are; perchance you will find the power to resist and stand up. To represent this quality not only in action but in being. These women have nothing to lose and invest selflessly in a better world to come.

© Anneke Wittermans

translated in English thanks to Ans Piepenbrock for her support translated in German thanks to Rosalinde Busch fo her support.

The last of the female line, radiating people